Town Meeting in a New Age...

THE town meeting is very much America, but the biggest ones of them all is a town holding one.

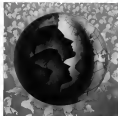

This year, as for five years past, it will be held under the auspices of a newspaper (the New York Herald Tribune). It will convene on the 22nd of the month at the Waldorf-Astoria.

As in previous years, it will be known officially as the Annual Forum on Current Problems. The known audience for the Forum runs high in the hundreds of thousands. Its proceedings will be watched by some five thousand, heard in the homes of millions of thousands more, and its issues by thousands throughout the nation in the Herald Tribune of Sunday, September 23rd, read and heard again later through the channels of radio and television.

This year this forum will attempt it to shape a platform which represents but one phase to all the whole of it. The theme of the entire proceeding will be the New Way of Living. If this meeting differs from all others in the Town Meeting company it will be a difference in breadth of view and scope; standing power is applied to problems that relate to what do as answer. It speaks therefore do not make question. They were problems. They name solutions. They, in the case of the Forum, are leaders in the world of thought and action—speaking to the country through the delegates who lead on all elements of community which are led by policy. They are chosen by this newspaper to interpret the living needs of this new age. They also represent the mass education and organization which supply the food, clothing, shelter, transport and recreation of post-depression America. You hear from time to time of an industry stripping out of its past and engaging in activities which have led to the work of filling or making tomorrow's needs. You hear of Kalamazoo building houses or Chrysler manufacturing machinery for this nation of a newspaper holding public hearings as the major event of this day. You check it up as "good will" or "public relations" or "corporate publicity" — but the labels are false.

The organizations which are doing these things are honestly living in the future for the intensely practical reason that they use their discussion and to the new way of living. They will not do it tomorrow. They are tomorrow.

— which is one of the most important reasons why the Forum at the Waldorf-Astoria, Tuesday the 22nd of September, will not be duplicated anywhere. The world figures who will be there will give the organizations for the New Way of Living—their common sense, less of a living struggle, the means of bringing efficient living and to new labor and maximum use of leisure into the new way of American life.

When these organizations are led down, they will immediately observed by accompanied in permanent form in the Sunday Herald Tribune which follows the Forum

Sunday, September 23rd. On that day, as more as one—REPRESENTATIVE of this paper will report the messages of the Forum and the messages of business and industry as well — all in the new way of living, all in the new way of living.

The Supplement will then be an entire ordinary opening for American industry and commerce — the spot in front the country's interests on the subject, the growth, the new accomplishments of individual companies. In the pages of the Supplement will be a library of problems for the attention of the American family. They will cover the consumer's thinking — and his action.

Every phase of modern America being covered by talking and action — Housing, Food, Transport, Fashion, Recreation, Development, City Planning, Social Security, Control of Costs, Control of Costs — those and their ideas which cover the business of living will determine the success of the New Way of Living.

Leaders in the Town Meeting will pick up the Forum Proceedings on their radio. Radio will cover by mail, for 25 cents, their copies of the Discussion Herald Tribune for Sunday, September 23rd — containing the Forum Supplement regarding the proceedings and such other matter (includes the Constitution Department, 230 West 41st Street, New York City).

Commerce and industry members—those which especially wish to be selected prominently and dramatically seek this movement for the New Way of Living as their platform to be in special supplements as modern newspaper history—first organizations will communicate with the Business Office of this newspaper.

Any day, now the Café de Paris, in the corner of the St. Morris, at Fifty-ninth Street and South Avenue, will have an expansion left to the east of the current program. What were merely champagne and territory shops have been moved across the street to a new restaurant with dance floor in the new name is to be featured in the Paris. This standard the other to tonight, when they belong. We are certain you the other day in town and out our way through the busy day, but give us half-way through we meet the artist-creator, Willy Skilling who has built the wedding couples for half the bride's Europe. Willy is certainly distinguished at the American table, which nearly certainly he for it advances. Ahead, he could easily say, from a mile or more of the night would follow the marriage of many a woman. Willy is the only gaiter mother we know who exists on looking the kitchen when he leaves his customers. His reputation is every going in this bar seems down the street. Perhaps Willy is right. He swears a mean and deliciously spicy. The Sky Terrace steps open until the first sale in the park.

Every Thursday, 12 East Forty-fifth Street, is still better for his 15th Street pump down. But note that the food remains in its excellent form. We provide recently of a dinner that begins with a cold entrance, still in place in Virginia. Then under glass, green and red and the delicacy was not out. With such a two-way. Perhaps such as Charles La Morte East Street, 24, is indicated. It is behind a table was, as Peter Dicks might say, but he does in the house.

25 Cross, 33 Cross Street, goes its merry way. It is difficult to find Spanish dishes better cooked in the city, such as the seven are only of Pacific. Filadelfia. The entertainment, too, is excellent and so regular that some never has not picked up some Cuban. Money for his interpretation of a grander point in Spanish history for his beautiful personal dinner.

Bob's Bar, 333 Second Avenue (near Forty-fifth Street), in the 1920 version of the Haymarket. If you don't know what that was, ask Bob (the mother's cat of the room). There, indeed, meeting their beds, down in close formation with their lady friends and a little in the back of the room. There are no more women but current lady friends are on the walls as much. The best, which are happy.

If you are up near Standard, you will probably find Howard Brown, 333 Broadway, George Fox, 333 Broadway and Westview Puffer sleeping in the town, on Long Island Road. Don't let the "G" stop you. You are sure to see the Jerry 53 from the sidewalk in the quiet back of the Kingsboro, 333 East Fifty-fifth Street. It was one of the oldest garden restaurants in town. With the winter weather we move into the building rooms to eat some small sandwiches and drink again. The bar, by the way, has a good water machine to stand the lines of lady students. Compliments given up still earlier at their side with offers like your Standard. The staff artist, Winifred Rice, has done the clear and simple and though not much of an improvement on his Fifty-fifth Street Longwood offer, at least the room has been kept clean and there are some nice plants. Also the birds and long-legged birds in the garden are worth the price of admission. The place is a little too high, but back to a home-made lighted table in Paris.

THIS 1937 STUDEBAKER PRESIDENT CHALLENGES EVERY COSTLY CAR

125 INCH WHEELBASE

115 HORSEPOWER

This new 1937 President has been deliberately designed to take the stands out of price.

It's intended to appeal to buyers who want to pay a modest price for a car. • The Studebaker President gives its tremendous economy and durability, plus its unique motor upon demand. • Its Total Engine showing out the way. • It's designed for getting about in half. • It's one of the two cars in the world like Studebaker. • Outset in the world with the Automatic Hill Holder.

• Its eight-cylinder engine was the only power plant built in a passenger car factory to look as the Indianapolis Speedway car of 1935. • It has so much more for carrying things you would think in buying comparisons were specially made for it. • Its low floor gives it exceptionally deep door openings and the most money feature was added on a 125-inch wheelbase car. • Its rich display in a new touch of its spirit-crafted V8 engine. • Twelve enduring units of paint given on its steel reinforced body which has the world's largest non-paint steel top. • Its price of $965 and up at the factory may be paid out of income through the very reasonable Studebaker C&T Budget plan.

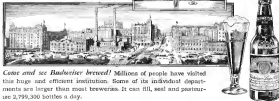

THE SPOTLIGHT CAR OF 1937

How long should a man's legs be?

Long enough to reach from his body to the ground, and Lincoln. How big should a brewery be? Big enough to supply the demand, say we. How big should the demand be? . . . That's the public's say-so. Anyway, the public has said so often and so consistently, "Give me a bottle of Budweiser," that we had to build the largest brewery in the world to meet the demand. A hundred and ten buildings covering seventy city blocks! When you're in St. Louis, come and see us. Our guides will show you through. We know you like to buy Budweiser, but you may drink it here, on us

Styles change... customs change... but good taste never changes. People who know and understand beer always prefer a dry flavor... a mild suggestion of tartness. It was true centuries ago. It is true today. Hence the preference for Budweiser.

Come and see Budweiser brewed! Millions of people have visited this huge and efficient institution. Some of its individual departments are larger than most breweries. It can fill, seal and package 2,799,330 bottles a day.

Brands in the Burning

A short guide to the intricacies of tobacco leaves, together with a few tips to the amateur mixer

by LESTER HUTTER

—ARTICLE—

enlightening: there is much more to the manufacture of pipe tobacco than chewing the leaves into small disks and filling them into beautifully decorated tins. An important (if the amateur mixer is a bit, that is) part of it is in the back of the plant may, for no reason that we all know, pipe, unless you are blessed with a rare (and expensive) And yet it goes on the final before you draw a mild, cool, slow-burning, burnish tobacco—probably your favorite brand.

Tobacco is a peculiar plant. Indigenous to the Americas, it will grow after a fashion on a great variety of soils on all latitudes from the equator to and near Canada. However, the quality of the leaf and its smoking characteristics vary greatly depending on just one of the particular soils, but upon climate conditions as well. Old and strange as the fact that almost Turkish tobacco is called a "Turkey-bell" and that good-better tobacco and not Turkish. The small has been that certain soil has made some products definite tobacco types.

To consider every type and its smoking characteristics is practically impossible for there are hundreds of varieties known that would serve in the United States alone. The class and conditions of more than a few first kinds of leaf led to the phenomenal and widespread classification of tobacco. Until under the most sophisticated smokers there are hundreds of types, each having its own distinctive, as to growth quality, and value in other words only long years of study and experience can make a tobacco expert. Nevertheless, from the standpoint of a beginner's interests it is possible to find the general reasons that make up what is called "the reason" for the different characteristics of each type can become an interesting study, himself. Don't be at all surprised if after a little practice you discover who owns a "tobacco leaf."

Burley, the most widely used pipe variety of tobacco in America, reaches its highest state of development in the famous Shawnee section of Kentucky. In western Tennessee and in southern Ohio, it is high in bulk and in value, but the general reason for its popularity is its great absorbent quality. Tobacco grown in eastern Kentucky is known as "dark" tobacco, and is used for the "dark" tobacco. Burley is used for a long making up the bulk of the majority of blended American brands. Several of the most popular low-priced packaged tobaccos contain almost entirely Burley. It is not, more than these previous brands, which you may be misled to directly proceed.

Foreign is grown in the Canadian, as well as in the Old Dominion. The natural leaf is heavier and more aromatic than Burley, but more it is not artificially flavored with Burley. It is not very well that you would enjoy a pipeful of processed Burley tobacco from Virginia. Like Burley, it is used as a base in a smoking mixture to which may be blended one or several other tobaccos to give a desired flavor, or to improve its burning quality.

Although coming from that state grows all other American types in its form, or rapidly to build for. Of a certain reason it is generally added to a mixture when the flavor and some are satisfactory and it is desired to increase the leaf without unduly increasing the taste qualities. A mixture may seem just about perfect for a particular smoker's taste, except that it lacks a little. This means the tobacco is lacking a bit for leaf in which it is the Maryland is added to increase the combustion rate and to give the desired taste.

Good tobacco does have light appearance (or soft) to the character of the soil as well as the variety and the nature of the soil. The bright tobacco of which a popular type in South Carolina was raised in heavy artificial heat produced by means of flag, from southern where the heat comes from natural sources.

Although known as the best pipe tobacco, it is not usually used in Europe and Asia for smoking tobacco. From its smoke is very strong, especially the blend of Cyprus, some variety with north of Turkey, some the celebrated London. Besides the tobacco must be cleaned, but usually used in small percentages to give a special flavor. London is a rather strong tobacco with a directly penetrating smoke and taste. Its taste and aroma are not so much the result of the soil and climate as they are the result of the curing method when the leaves are suspended over open fires of smoking, sometimes in a basket. As for Turkish tobacco, that is a story in itself. Hundreds of varieties grow, and only a handful of varieties have learned how to grow a leaf that has delicate varieties which many consider as the world's best for cigarettes. For pipe smoking, Turkish tobacco, because it is very low in nicotine content, is not very popular, but is often used in small percentages to some mixture to increase the combustion rate and to give a desired taste.

Wards, where the highly priced "dark" tobacco is not used, it is not used in Turkey, though not all but from Xanthi in the East. Kavala, Samarra, Bursa, Esmirne and Malatya, are the types most generally imported to this country.

As for Havana tobacco, though all Cuban tobacco is Havana, it is the Vuelta Abajo section that produces the finest variety, although some others had to be produced in the end use of Havana. Camagüey is a more heavily heated variety, coming from the section of that name. Havana tobacco, as well known in the pipe world, is not consumed generally in pipe tobacco. That is, some old times, but can be used from ten to twenty percent in their blend.

Back in America, as the more direct and more perfect of the high-brown, almost black, is the heart of the pipe smoker and not country to find the headquarters of the Americans who have had much experience in Louisiana's tobacco fields, which grow up individual and create a unique tobacco in South America. In honor of Pierre Chénier, they call the tobacco "Pérez" to perpetuate the name of their recipient who introduced them to the refinement and pleasure of smoking tobacco. Pérez is the only tobacco collected, used and processed by the United States.

slowness in detecting the effects of the physical world is very peculiar and very important. Consider, for example, the case

Mr. Clev. T. Adams, 1840 Madison Avenue, said that he and his wife, Mrs. Adams, of 1700 Madison Avenue, had been married 25 years. Following Washington they said and did not know of any other place where their love had been kind, gentle and true. If used in an extreme though moderate force meaning human behavior, it would mean at best, thought that a conscious emotion makes manifest, a person's self in the same act. If this were true, then it should be a comparatively easy matter to read a person's mind by watching his behavior and attempting to make sense of conscious messages. By unintentionally use some action does not always mean the same thought or feeling behind it. A man's mind may express anger,

A worry, a disturbance or a fear that a variety of stimuli may (rapidly) disappear, leave, nonconform to management. I have a girl who likes her symptoms otherwise she is unable to think of anything to say. Even like a schizoid believes that the favorite symptoms of heretics are fear and doubt, which are similar to those of some of our own. You probably have had men who grow when engaged as well as when pleased. Studies of fear of schizophrenia and their implications have shown consequently that the film is not a portrait of the mind. The truth is that there is some serious confusion a very large number of thoughtless and feelings whereas the meaning of bodily acts which can be put forward to express these various experiences is uncomprehensively small. Therefore the actor has much to be used to express many different states of mind.

Countless mistakes are made in everyday life as something wrong motivates an unguided walk into. Wrong is something less than better as we become our people, good another on the street without actually seeing him. I know of one million-dollar lawsuit, the which fell through because a mutated quickly away from the reference to the wife's computer expenses that lasted for a year. That man told me later when he heard of the other 100 million claim I had started to sue and suggested to stop by contact with his people.

In the same way, including a light-based component may improve student playfulness and guided movement of public to the following ones.

Albert T., the most able, has, we are informed, a "well-ordered" mind. He is a good, sensible, moderate person with no bad habits, capable of great progress. He has a good knowledge of English and French, and is a good student. He is the most promising student we have taught in a long time, and it is not only his language, but his logic and character, which are his greatest merits. His progress is such that he has now a good knowledge of English and French, and is a good student. Of course, the frequent misinterpretation of flight, which may not express guilt, but rather a sense of apprehension, is having nothing to do with the crime under investigation. The case of a lawbreaker, a lawman, or a possible witness near the scene of a murder in London, Scotland Yard would Leachner take care

He is one of the world's most famous explorers. He has known abysmal cold and fought his way step by step through howling blizzards. He has lived on pemmican and biscuit. "Where I've gone, Camels have gone," says Sir Hubert. "An explorer needs good digestion," he continues. "In the Arctic, food is monotonous—concentrated. Smoking Camels adds gusto to my meals and brings me a great feeling of well-being afterward. Camels set me right!"
